ACKNOWLEDGMENT

This work has been undertaken to spotlight a group of individuals who have been long neglected historically. To comprehend the emergence of the United States from the colonial period, a thorough understanding of the labor force used in the development of the agricultural Chesapeake region is necessary. Part of the labor force that contributed to the Chesapeake region consisted of indentured servants and to a greater extent the slaves who labored tirelessly in the tobacco fields in the Tidewater region of Maryland and Virginia. The focus of this particular work is the slave and indentured servants lists of Old Somerset County, Maryland 1668-1720. To encourage further study of the labor force used to create the economy of the Chesapeake region during the colonial period, the compiler offers this listing.

The compiler would like to offer an expression of thanks to Dean Fafoutis for his help in the creation of this work and to Rebecca Miller, Director of the Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture, for help in the transcription of names and for her words of encouragement. An expression of gratitude and a debt of thanks must also be extended to Dr. G. Ray Thompson for his assistance in compiling this list of slaves and indentured servants.

INTRODUCTION

The importance of the inventory as a primary source of information for study during the colonial period cannot be overstated. This is readily apparent upon examining the history of Old Somerset County, Maryland. Since the formation of Somerset County in 1666, a rich repository of information has been maintained from one generation of people to the next. This work illustrates some of the rich history of the region. In so doing, data has been extracted from Inventories of Old Somerset County, Maryland 1666-1720: A Locator Index With User's Introduction, to provide information often overlooked in traditional historic study.

Inventories provide a wealth of information concerning the estates of early residents of Somerset County. In short they provide a listing of possessions an individual accumulated over a lifetime. Upon one's death, an inventory was taken to allow creditors to assess the ability of the estate to cover any outstanding debt. Such inventories also allowed individuals to determine if the estate they inherited provided additional wealth or debt to their own holdings. Listed within the possessions were people who owed service to the estate, namely slaves and indentured servants, the focus of this listing. In some respects, these individuals were dehumanized as the inventory's only concern in listing slaves and servants was to assess their economic value to the estate. However, depending on the clerks evaluating the estate, additional information can be derived that allows not only for an economic study, but social and cultural study as well. By examining the economic foundations of slaves and indentured servants, information emerges outside of the economic sphere which provides additional clues to these people's lives. In particular; were there female slaves/servants or were the owners merely concerned with the brute strength of males similar to the slave owners on the sugar plantations in the Caribbean? Were the people in Somerset County interested in owning families of slaves or servants? What were the ages of these people and did they possess any special skills? Was there a difference in evaluating the worth of a slave or indentured servant? By extracting the list of slaves and servants from the inventories, answers to these aforementioned questions can be determined.

The estates are listed chronologically providing the day, month and year the inventory was taken. The liber and folio of the inventory is then listed, followed by the name of the owner and worth of the estate. Within this listing the name and ages of slaves and indentured servants is presented. The information provided in the slave and indentured servant section varies. Some estates list the names, ages and health. The listing may also mention special skills of particular individuals. Within the listings are mentioned orphaned children who are indentured out and became servants themselves. Other information derived from the inventories include: the number of years of service required for freedom; the racial mixture with specific mention of mulattos, marital status; and, at times, if their service was inadequate. One can also determine the disappearance of indentured servants over time and the emergence of slavery as the dominant labor force. While some listings are detailed, others limit their information to a simple listing of the total number of slaves or indentured servants and their overall value. Consequently these people are lost to us historically.

The following sources were consulted to find all the individuals who left estates with slaves or indentured servants listed as possessions:
